FFVP Focus May: Swiss Chard

Swiss Chard is a green leafy vegetables of European origin. Botanically, it belongs to the beet family of vegetables. It grows annual widely around the Mediterranean region and it available at its peak during summer months from June–November. Swiss Chard is one of the healthiest vegetables on the planet, next to Spinach, because of its many phytonutrients that have health promotional and disease prevention properties. Chard leaves are an excellent source of vitamins–C, K, A and B and a rich source of minerals. Due to its exceptional nutritional content, Swiss Chard aids in controlling heart rate, blood pressure, cholesterol and weight reduction.
