

BIKE PATROL

Patrolling the District's communities via bicycle gives officers mobility through alleys and other difficult terrain that can give them an advantage over other vehicles.

Each police district and the Special Operations Division has a Mountain Bike Unit that helps patrol these areas and enables officers to travel to a call quickly and safely. Bike officers also offer a tactical advantage in situations requiring a more stealthy response — they make almost no noise, so perpetrators of crime have less time to react to their presence. They also give officers a chance to develop closer ties to the communities they serve.
